TERRORS OF THE RED SEA.

Heat Is Killing, and French Sick and Wounded Will Have a Hard Time. "The veritable hell of our earth," remarked the Calcutta representative of a New York firm, home on his biennial cable dispatch stating that the invalid sol-diers of France's Madagascan campaign would be returned via the Sucz Canal in stead of voyaging around the Cape of Good Hope. "It is a sea that is literally infernal in its heat. It does not look large on the maps, but it stretches for nearly 1,560 miles between the incandescent shores of Egypt and Arabia, and its greatest width is less than 200

"I have traversed it six times, and I have been on the verge of collapse every trip when we reached Aden or Port Said, so I think it likely many of the French sick and wounded soldiers will not survive the towners. "The heat is terrific. For nine months in the year the mercury remains at about 98 degrees in the shade, and when there is a breeze from the torrid descrits to the west or east it is as hot as the breath of a furnace. A year frequently goes by without a drop of rain failing, and I have heard incredible stories of the heat which the desert sands stories of the ficat which the desert same along its banks seem to store up. I have never cared to land to verify any of them, but an Englishman told me that he put a thermometer in the sand once and the mercury slid up to 178 degrees.

"The water of the Red Sea, as may be imagined, is also very warm, and I have heard it asserted that it loses by evapora-tion each year enough to make itself an aqueous bhasket twenty-three feet thick.

Naturally it is one of the saltest of water on the fluden Ocean, you know, and receives no water to speak of from any other source. It has been estimated that if its supply were cut off by closing the Strait of Bub el Mandeb and the Sucz the Strait of Bab el Manceb and the Suca Canal it would take only a few years for the fierce sun to dry it up entirely. "It takes the P and O, steamers about a week to run from Aden, at the southern end, in Arabia, to Port Said on the canal, and going either way the boats always stop at one or the other of these two ports to take on a game of Arab firences, for no to take on a gaug of Arab firemen, for no other race has been found that can stand the awful heat of the furnace room in this torrid climate. These Arabs are thin, muscular feilows, almost as dark as negroes, and it is worth running the risk of fainting to get a glimpse of them when they are at work stark naked down in the boiler-room of the vessel, looking like a band of devils feeding the infernal fires.*

—N. Y. World.

Nat Goodwin a short time ago gave a unlatto porter at his hotel a suit of old diothes. A few days ago the porter came up to him in the hotel corridor and

"Look here, Mr. Goodwin, I came very "Look here, Mr. Goodwin, I came very near having a fight last night."
"How's that?" asked the actor.
"Why, I was walking down Broadway and a gentleman said to me, 'Good even-ing, Mr. Goodwin.' If he hadn't ex-plained that he meant no disrespect to you, I'd have licked him."—New York Evening World.
